FINE EDUCATIONAL EXHIBIT TRAIN

A SMALL ATTENDANCE BUT MUCH INTEREST.

Synopsis of Exhibit as Given in Grayling Monday.

One of the greatest educational features offered people of this vicinity is the health and pure food special, which visited Grayling while on its tour of the lower peninsula. This train is sent out by the Michigan State Board of Health and the Dairy and Food Commissions and brings a most forceful message to the hundreds who visit it. The train arrived here on Sunday night and remained here until Monday at 10 o'clock a. m.

The Board of Health car places special emphasis upon the necessity for the prevention of tuberculosis and the extermination of the fly. Charts, cartoons and statistical data are used most effectively, while working models add greatly to the interest. The Michigan fresh air shack for the use of tuberculosis patients and others who need fresh air treatment attracted a great deal of attention as a large sized model shows in detail its construction. The material for this costs but $18.21 and plans are distributed to all interested.

A counter recording the number of deaths from tuberculosis since the train started out, increased the number by one every two and a half minutes. One can not help appreciating the dangers of the common drinking cup when he sees a degenerate hebo, evidently diseased, drinking from a cup and a moment later sees a woman offering the same cup to a child.

A moving row of baby baskets presents a shocking fact when every seventh one drops down and is replaced by a tiny grave and tombstone, showing that every seventh babe born into the registration area of the United States dies before it reaches the second year, most of the deaths being due to the ignorance of parents. An interesting model shows impressively that a deep well is not always a safe well. Attracting a great deal of attention are the pamphlets which thoroughly expose many patent remedies. In this connection a bottle of "Dr. Fake's Consumption Cure" is electrically illuminated with a skull and cross bones. The car is in charge of Frank J. Pienta, who is assisted by Daniel E. McClure, Wm. Force and George E. Boss of the board of health department at Lansing.

A feature of the car is a display concerning school hygiene and sanitation and which is of special interest to rural districts though touching upon general principles governing the health of school children. The effect of the lack of attention to the teeth and adenoids is clearly shown while the correct lighting of school rooms and proper installation of window shades is brought out with models. That a rural school can be made as sanitary and comfortable as a city building is proven by a working model of heating and ventilating, paper towels as opposed to the roller towels a sanitary drinking fountain to replace the common water pail and cups and indoor chemical closets, which are both sanitary and odorless, to solve the outdoor outhouse problem. This exhibit is in charge of G. S. Lasher of the department of public instruction.

The dairy and food car is of keen interest and carries its lessons to every farmer, house wife, user and purchaser of drugs. Commissioner James W. Helme's vigorous campaign against "cure-all" remedies, beauty lotions and other doubtless productions which have been placed upon the market is well known and a display of these articles is effectively presented. The purchaser is told just what is contained in the packages sold and its practical proficiency. Many adulterated and impure foods are shown, foods that are being sold to unknowing purchasers. A new law effective Aug. 14, makes it unlawful to present any misleading advertisement. Specimens of such deceptive advertising are on display and purchasers learn that they have been paying fancy prices for oleomargarine under the belief that they were buying butter, or securing chloory, though paying for coffee.

Another new law gives the dairy and food department authority to inspect weights and measures so the methods by which the purchaser has been cheated out of, a good portion of what he paid for is unusually timely. On a regulation peck measure filled with potatoes is a placard "What he should get," on a partially filled measure is "what he does get" when the dealer uses the common bottomless measure while six or eight potatoes is the telling legend "What he doesn't get." Berry boxes which cause the consumer to lose four quarts out of a bushel look familiar. That some food manufacturers really evade the law governing the correct labeling of goods is proven by the considerable number of packages which are often seen on the dealer's shelves. The use

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Frank S. Burgess Kills Baby and Takes Own Life.

The people of this city were shocked last Tuesday morning on learning of the terrible tragedy that had been performed in our midst. Frank S. Burgess, a resident of this place for about 18 years and well known to almost everybody, had, judging from appearances taken his life and perhaps the life of the three year old daughter of Mrs. Marvin Howse.

Mrs. Howse had been keeping house for Mr. Burgess and his son Ransom for some time since the death of Mrs. Burgess in December last, and Mr. Burgess who appeared somewhat attached to her, seemed to resent the attention given her by others. Jealousy seemed to play an important part in the affair.

Mrs. Howse tells her story of the fatal Monday night but seems to give no real reason for the crime. She says that about 11:15 p. m. Monday, Mr. Burgess came to her window, and when she asked him what he wanted he said that "I want to talk." "Can't you wait 'till morning?" said Mrs. Howse. The answer was "No! I want to see you now," and forthwith pushed himself through the window. Mrs. Howse quickly unlocked her bedroom door and says that she fled to the washroom, passing through three rooms to get there. Burgess followed and, according to her story, says that he attacked her with a sharp knife or razor. Considerable blood was found in this room. Mrs. Howse tried to ward off her assailant with a broom.

Finally, she said, he left her and went into a room where he kept a rifle and she managed to get the back door open and fled to the street in her night robes, screaming for help. Mr. Burgess followed her into the street and nearly to Knight's boarding house where Mrs. Howse had gone. The woman says that he had something in his hands but cannot say what it was, only that she could hear something clicking. Several cartridges that fitted his automatic rifle were found along the route they had taken. Evidently he had tried to shoot and the rifle failed to discharge.

Finding that the woman had foiled him he returned to the house and stood upon the front porch when two men came along and asked what the trouble was and he answered that he didn't know, only that a lady had run past the place yelling for help. He then turned into the house. In a very short time a shot was heard and Ransom, the son of Mr. Burgess, whose bedroom was upstairs, across the hall from his father's room, came down calling for help and saying that his father had shot himself.

Officers soon arrived and found Mr. Burgess in his room sitting on the floor with his back against the window sill and the muzzle of a 30 calibre Winchester resting on his stomach and the stock of his gun resting on the window frame above him. He was dead. Another gruesome sight awaited the investigators for in the bedroom where Mrs. Howse had been, lay her little 2½ year old daughter, with its throat cut. The baby was taken to Mercy hospital but soon died.

Mrs. Howse is 18 years old and not bad looking. It is said that jealousy had crept in. This together with being financially hard up causing mental worry, is believed to have unbalanced Burgess' mind and that he was raving crazy at this time.

In the first part of the evening he had written letters to his son Ransom, his sister, Mrs. Ingles of Mackinaw City, and the sheriff of this county and placed them into Ransom's hands for delivery.

of poisons in coloring vegetables is clearly demonstrated while coal tar colors are found in candies.

Considerable attention is paid to the dangers of impure milk and graphic illustration of the filth which is found in the popular beverage are in evidence. A model dairy arrangement together with the latest equipment is especially interesting to farmers and dairymen. Among other things is seen a model cow stall which can be built by any farmer and is satisfactory from every standpoint. The importance of milk as a food is impressed upon the visitors by a comparison of other food values, making a most effective argument for the cheapness and nutriment of milk. An exhibit of meat affected by tuberculosis is a source of educational interest to all.

"Mother's milk for babies, cow's milk for calves," is a title of a poster that brings out a reason why so many children die in infancy. The fly also comes in for an added indictment, as the car emphasizes the point that 90 percent of the flies are born in manure piles while nearly 100 per cent carry with them the germs of typhoid, cholera infantum, tuberculosis or infantile paralysis so the slogan adopted reads "No fly, no flies, save lives."

Fire insurance is too cheap to be without. Why are you so negligent? GEO. L. ALEXANDER & SON.

LOSE SERIES TO OTSEGOS

BIG LEAGUERS TO MUCH FOR GRAYLING'S FAST TEAM.

Sunday's Game Drew Large Attendance From Outside.

The base ball games that had been scheduled for August 16th, 17th and 18th between the local team and Henry Stephen's Otsego team are a thing of the past. We were beaten in all three games and must take the bitter with the sweet. It was a bitter pill to swallow but we played the game that any amateur team in the state might be proud of. Our boys didn't play up to their usual standard but there may be some good reasons for that.

We venture to say that had Mitchell been in the old sun field and McMann or Dodge in right and Fuller in working order on third that in all probability there would have been a different story to tell than the one it becomes our painful duty to give our readers. Captain Bibbins had been on the sick list for more than a week, and under the doctor's care, Fuller wasn't much better.

These are excuses but they are honest ones and we wish our readers to know that even with the lineup of veteran leaguers, for such were the Otsegoes, Grayling could have held her own had our players been in their regular positions and physically right.

Patterson went in to pitch for Grayling in Saturday's game and held the sluggers down to seven hits; Owen for the Otsegoes held the game to 5 hits and no scores. Lack of space prevents our giving details of all the games. Following is the score by innings.

Sunday's game was a big event and both teams were hopeful victors. The day started out with clear skies and people began to arrive in special trains and autos. The special train running from West Branch north brought in 150 people; train from the north brought 425 and the M. & N. E. train 370 people. There were bands from Gaylord, Boyne City, and the boosters' band from West Branch, blowing hard for their county fair. It rained hard during the game but stopped in time to finish the game.

Although but few safe hits were made off the pitchers in Sunday's game there was considerable juggling around of pitchers. Mullen was taken out of the box after the third inning in favor of Killian, but he was hit so hard that he only lasted one inning and was replaced by Owen who pitched the day before. Owen allowed but one hit during the remainder of the game-five innings. Three hits had been made off Dodge before the last man was out in the sixth inning; and three off Laurent in the remaining innings.

McDonnell opened the game for Otsegoes by batting fly to Letzkus, near right territory who muffed ball; Cocash hit to Dodge who threw to second but nobody covered sack. Wright hit to Woodburn, who fumbled ball-bases full. Berger dropped Mullen's fly scoring McDonnell. Grunfeld fouled to Bibbins. Lane walked, scoring Cocash. Wright tried to score on Bowerman's hit and was out at plate. Dodge threw out Miller at last. No hits, two runs, four errors.

Grayling, Miller fumbled Fuller's grounder. Bibbins flied to Grunfeld. Woodburn flied to Cocash. Fuller stole second and scored on Dodge's double to center. McMann struck out. 1 hit one run; one error.

The Fact That We Can Place You In a Position

strange as it may seem, is not regarded by us as the important part of our service. We can and do place you, it is true, but preparing you to do a definite thing to perform valuable service in the business world which enables you to make rapid and material progress toward bigger pay, that is the essential thing about your investment in the Bay City Business College training.

You simply can't prevent getting a position! But the average young man or woman who takes a spec- alized course of training with us does not need to remain in positions as bookkeepers or stenographers very long. A good supply of energy, initiative, perseverance along with business efficiency forces them higher up.

The position which you accept as a bookkeeper or stenographer offers you a stepping-stone, a means to get started, and by industry and perseverance, you will quickly rise into a position of responsibility where you hire some one beneath you to do the purely mechanical work of shorthand, typewriting or bookkeeping.

This will explain why so many of our graduates are found as superintendents of factories, office managers, sales managers, etc.

POINTS OF SULZER DEFENSE GIVEN

CLAIMED THAT WIFE OF GOVERNOR WAS TRICKED INTO SPECULATION.

AGENT OF TAMMANY HALL WAS IN HOME.

Private Secretary Is Relied On to Testify That Horgan Gave Tip On Big Four and Urged Investigation.

That a conspiracy was hatched by Wall street and Tammany hall to get Gov. Sulzer hopelessly entangled and in their clutches—a conspiracy with a woman as its unwitting victim—will be charged as a basis of the defense of the impeached governor, if the impeachment comes to trial.

Sulzer and his counsel confidently hope that it will not. They believe the action of the assembly will be declared unconstitutional and that the impeachment court will never assemble.

The high points of the conspiracy story on which Sulzer has built his hopes of a complete vindication are these:

1—That while Sulzer was away campaigning Matthew T. Horgan, who was living at the Sulzer home, and keeping Charles F. Murphy informed of events, gave Mrs. Sulzer the tip on Big Four.

2—At that time Sulzer was in debt $48,000, and Mrs. Sulzer saw an opportunity to rehabilitate the family finances by acting on this market tip. She was assured that it could not go wrong.

3—Campaign contributions had been coming in large amounts, and she took the checks, regarding her act as a legitimate temporary loan, and bought stocks.

4—She was assured there would be an immediate and sensational rise in the price of Big Four and she could take her profits and reimburse the campaign fund.

5—That her bankbooks and memoranda of these transactions were stolen so she would be unable to furnish proof of her acts if ever called on to do so.

It is claimed that Louis A. Sarecky, Sulzer's private secretary, had full knowledge of all these transactions and aided Mrs. Sulzer in carrying out her plan to rehabilitate her husband's finances. He is looked to by the Sulzer defense to take the stand and swear that Horgan gave Mrs. Sulzer the tip, assuring her that it could not go wrong and that she would certainly make a profit of many thousands dollars.

Telegraphers Win Increased Pay. Negotiations which have been pending between the telegraph operators of the Northern Pacific and the officials of the road concerning demands for higher wages and better working conditions were satisfactorily adjusted. The operators have voted to strike if adjustment was not made. The telegraphers gained an increase in salary, shorter hours. Sunday overtime in some of the larger offices and partial abandonment of the "split" trick.

Railroads Ask More Pay. Officials of 17 western railroads, including the Santa Fe, Burlington, Rock Island and other trunk lines, signed a telegram that was sent to Postmaster General Burleson, urging the government to increase the compensation of the roads for handling the mail. The increase is asked on the ground that the volume of mail has greatly increased as a result of the establishment of the parcel post.

Steamer Strikes Rock Off Coast of Alaska and Sinks Within Three Minutes.

Twenty-five passengers and seven seamen were lost when the steamer State of California of the Pacific Coast Co.'s fleet struck an uncharted rock and was wrecked in Gambier Bay, Alaska.

The steamer sank within three minutes after striking and many passengers were drowned before they could get out of their staterooms.

Dispatches from Juneau say that it is impossible to give the correct list of the missing, as the pursuer saved no records.

News of the wreck and the heavy loss of life did not reach Juneau until the steamship Jefferson arrived with some of the passengers and crew who had been rescued from the icy waters.

Among the dead are Mrs. Nellie B. Ward, wife of Edward C. Ward, assistant general manager of the company at Seattle, and their daughter, Miss Lillie Ward, who succumbed to exposure after her rescue.

The vessel was one of the oldest and best known on this coast and until recently plied between San Francisco and Portland. It was built in Philadelphia in 1879. About a year ago it was laid up in this port and underwent repairs costing about $100,000.

The vessel was of 1,260 net tonnage, 300 feet long, 38 feet beam, 24 feet deep.

The State of California was going at full speed when she struck the reef and a great portion of the ship's bottom was torn off, letting in a flood of water which quickly engulfed the boat.

Reunions of the various regiments will be held at 2 o'clock p. m., September 3, and the campfire of all the regiments will be held that evening. Tuesday night the veterans, with their wives and families, will be given a reception by the citizens of Ann Arbor. On Thursday morning the business meeting will be held.

TWO SUITS A WEEK

Fine Clothes Help Spanish King to Keep Throne.

Monarch Believed to Spend More Money on Wardrobe Than Any Ruler Except Czar of Russia—Wears Startling Vests.

London.—The king of Spain is the most elaborately attired monarch in Europe.

It is doubtful if the youthful monarch has ever been seen more than half a dozen times in the same suit, and it is certain that there are many suits in which he has been seen but once or twice.

When he takes a fancy to a particular tweed or cloth he will often order a dozen suits from it straightaway and wear each but two or three times. If he tires of the material before he has worn the whole dozen he will have the lot put out of the royal wardrobe. It would be difficult to say how many suits of clothes the king of Spain orders in the year.

The number greatly varies. Sometimes King Alfonso will order as many as a couple of dozen suits at a time, while at other times he will give his tailor, or rather one of them, for he patronizes several, an order for but one or two suits.

The king of Spain keeps from 100 to 150 suits in the royal wardrobe and buys on an average of 100 suits a year.

His majesty's bill to his tailor alone averages $5,000 a year, of which sum

King Alfonso of Spain.

London tailors get a good share. There is one London tailor who, when the king of Spain was the guest of the duke of Westminster at Eton hall some little while ago, took an order from the Spanish monarch for 40 suits.

The tailor was asked by wire to go to the duke's residence, and returned to London with the largest single order he ever received in his pocket.

There is no monarch who is so punctilious about being dressed in the extreme of fashion as his Spanish majesty. Any suit out of date is at once put out of the royal wardrobe, although it may only have been worn by the king once, or possibly not worn at all. The king of Spain has not any particular fancy for any material (except perhaps a striped flannel for summer wear) so far as the pattern goes. He appears equally often in light and dark clothes of different pattern, but he never wears a heavy material of any sort.

His majesty has a particular liking for fancy waistcoats. He buys dozens of them and pays from $15 to $25 apiece for them. In waistcoats alone he spends at least $1,000 a year.

When he came over to the English court in 1905 to woo the then Princess Victoria, he was found in the vicinity, but a searching party discovered him in a clump of bushes a mile from the scene of the explosion, unable to remember what had happened. He was taken to the hospital, but later was sent home. The workmen were badly burned.

Debris was scattered for several miles and the detonation was felt for a great distance. The building was of stony construction and the monetary loss will not be great. The men were packing rockets in the factory when the explosion occurred.

Winchester, Mass.—The factory of the New England Fireworks company went up in a puff of smoke, the result of an explosion, carrying with it manager Ernest Borelli and three workmen. Borelli was thought to have been killed, when portions of his clothing, his eyeglass case and some coins cess Ena he had in his wardrobe come waistcoats of rather more remarkable pattern than was possible even for a monarch to wear, in England at all events, without being thought to violate good taste.

Clearly a hint had to be given to the young monarch on the matter, and his royal host, the late King Edward, with characteristic tact, thought of the best way of doing this without offending the royal guest. The Princess Ena was instructed to say something on the subject to King Alfonso, and there after his majesty was never seen in a fancy waistcoat except of the most correct pattern according to English notions.

The king of Spain, like all very well dressed men, is extremely particular about having ties that harmonize correctly with his clothes. He purchases about 100 ties in the year, which cost him from $5 to $10 each, and buys most of them in Paris.

On shirts the Spanish monarch spends about the same as he does on ties.

His polo shirts cost him $15 apiece and are made of the finest silk, and he puts a dozen of them out of the royal wardrobe every season.

King Alfonso changes his collar and shirt three times a day, and rarely wears a shirt that has been laundered more than three or four times.

Suicide Is An Exception

Gradual Increase in Breaking of Law Among Younger Males Also Shown by Statistics.

New York.—That married men are better than single ones is the most remarkable feature of a report of an investigation made by the district attorney's office which has just been made public. Out of the 2,857 men convicted last year only 784 were married, as compared to 2,063 who were unmarried. The one startling exception is in the case of suicide, the report showing that among men who attempt to take their own lives the married outnumber the single three to one.

A comparison for the last nine years gives 7,670 convictions of married men for all sorts of crimes and 18,406 convictions of unmarried men. The report indicates that there is a gradual increase in crime among young men, the male criminals under the age of thirty years having increased in number from 1,700 in 1904 to 2,500 in 1912. During the last year many offenders were between the years of fifteen and twenty.

Assault charges now show 40 under twenty years and 64 from twenty to thirty years; third-degree burglary, 213 for the younger period and 205 for the older; grand larceny in the second degree, 184 criminals under twenty years, and 258 from twenty to thirty; petit larceny, 157 under twenty and 144 from twenty to thirty years; unlawful entry, 34 under twenty years and 22 from twenty to thirty years. The total shows 940 under twenty convicted last year, and 1,278 offenders from thirty to forty years were convicted.

The statistics for women prisoners show that two-thirds of the women brought to court were under thirty years.

No More State Bread.

Paris.—A Dutch invention will shortly be put into practice here which, it is said, will be as great a boon to bakers as it will to housekeepers. It is the application of cold storage to freshly baked bread, so that there need be no more night work for the bakers. The process is exceedingly complicated and extensive factories in the vicinity, but a searching party discovered him in a clump of bushes a mile from the scene of the explosion, unable to remember what had happened. He was taken to the hospital, but later was sent home. The workmen were badly burned.

Debris was scattered for several miles and the detonation was felt for a great distance. The building was of stony construction and the monetary loss will not be great. The men were packing rockets in the factory when the explosion occurred.

LIFE IS RESTORED

Electrical Device Used in Effort to Save Hero.

Man's Heart Beats for Two Hours After Being Pronounced Dead From Drowning, by Use of Instrument.

New York.—For two hours after he had been declared dead from drowning the young wife and other relatives of Edgar Manjo watched spellbound around him at Babylon, L. I., as Dr. D. W. Wynkoop slowly brought him back to life, forcing his heart to beat with an electrical device. For long it was believed the young man would be saved, but suddenly respiration ceased and could not again be restored.

Manjo, who was only twenty, was a son of Louis Manjo, a retired export broker, well known on Wall street, and son-in-law of Commodore Searle of the Babylon Yacht club. With his wife he was spending the holiday at her parents' home and went bathing with his little niece, Susan Searle.

A few minutes after they had started the child burst, sobbing, into the Searle house, crying "Uncle is drowned!" When she grew calm enough to tell her story it was evident that Manjo gave his life to save hers.

The two had waded out into the river hand-in-hand. Apparently they had stepped unexpectedly into a deep hole or off a ledge of ground. Manjo, realizing that he could not swim, had with a last desperate effort thrown his niece back into the shallow, safe water as he himself went under.

Dr. Wynkoop, a local physician, was summoned. He got two short lengths of wire and placed one at the base of Manjo's tongue and the other against his diaphragm and connected the free ends with an electric battery. Manjo had been pronounced dead more than two hours when Dr. Wynkoop began his treatment.

An hour after the electrical machine was set in operation the awed spectators started back in astonishment. There were signs of returning life. First came a scarcely perceptible movement of the heart. Then slowly that organ resumed its functions and respiration was restored.

For two hours the heart beat regularly and respiration continued. The young wife hung over her husband praying that he might be restored to her and waiting for the return of consciousness. But consciousness did not return and suddenly both respiration and heart stopped and could not be re-started.

Dr. Wynkoop said he was greatly grieved his efforts had failed. It was the first time, he said, his treatment had been applied to a human being. He had been experimenting with animals some time and had revived many after death, as ordinarily understood, had taken place. He believed that had it been possible for him to begin earlier he would have saved Manjo's life. He explained that he turned the current on twenty times to the minute.

KITCHENER SNUBS THE KING

Famous English Soldier Ignores Ruler While Going Home for His Vacation.

London.—Lord Kitchener of Khartoum, British agent in Egypt, is home for a vacation to which his wonderful work during the last three years in the Sudan has won him a reputation of a degree or two below zero.

His way of ignoring his official superiors in the imperial government and even the king is without precedent. He has now been at his home in Brookmans Park, near London, for some time and has not yet been seen by the king or the queen.

He is now in the midst of his vacation and is not expected to return to his duties until the end of the month.

MURDER AND MURDER.

Frank S. Burgess Kills Baby and Takes Own Life.

that was addressed to Sheriff Benedict.

Mr. Benedict, Sheriff of Crawford County.

Dear Sir:

Please keep the crowd out of the house and leave Maggie (Mrs. Howse) here, until my sister in Machinaw city gets here, with my boy and be sure she gets this letter I leave for her. This is my last request on earth to man.

Yours truly,

F. S. BURGESS

The letters addressed to the son and sister are private matters and at their request not to publish them they will be omitted from these columns. It will be sufficient to state that the writer had deliberately planned upon taking the life of Mrs. Howse and that of his own. Failing in his attempt to kill the woman, evidently while in his crazed state of mind, he sought satisfaction from the baby. A large blood spot in the sitting room would indicate that the baby had wandered out into the room to find its mother and that it was here that it had met its death wound by having its little throat cut from ear to ear. The little thing was then carried in and laid on its mother's bed and it soon after found rest and comfort in peaceful eternity.

Mrs. Howse is the wife of Marvin Howse and the daughter of William Fairbairn. She is eighteen years old and has been married about three years. The baby, Alta, was a bright eyed little girl, about two and a half years old.

Mr. Burgess has been a resident of Grayling for nearly eighteen years and for the first eight years run a meat market where the bakery now stands. He served two terms as supervisor of this township, and for a number of years past was local agent for the American Express Co. He was well known around here and had always been well respected. Ransom upon whom the greater part of his father's burden of responsibility will fall, is a graduate of our schools and considered a good, clean boy. He has the sympathy of the community.

Mr. Burgess was born in Oakland Co. in 1861 and first married Flora Gilchrist, in 1881; in 1889 he was united in marriage to Anna Dave, and in 1907 to Cora Ballard, the latter having passed away during December last. There are three daughters in the family. Mrs. Wm. Schreiber of Otter Lake, Mrs. F. Bourcier of Flint, and Marguerite. Besides those above mentioned, two sisters and a brother were present at the funeral of Mr. Burgess, which was held at the home yesterday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. Rev. Hutton conducting the funeral service. The remains were laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery.

Rev. Hutton also conducted the funeral service for baby Alta. This was held at 2:00 o'clock at the M. E. church, and interment was at Elmwood cemetery.

THE BANDITS AND THE BURIED GOLD OF EL TEJON

By HARRY CARR

OLD Joaquin Murrieta's buried gold is growing restless in its hiding place. One of the herders of El Tejon rancho came in pale and frightened the other night. He had seen a ball of light flickering and dancing along the plateau of the Panderillos. He said it floated along the road in front of him for a long time as though to lead him somewhere. Finally, it stopped by the side of the road; he hurried past and went home as fast as he could. Being a Gringo from Cincinnati, he thought it was a ghost.

Any Mexican vaquero would have recognized the sign. Such a light burns over buried treasure—nowhere else.

Had he followed the light, it would probably have led him to the buried loot of old Joaquin Murrieta, Three-Fingered Jack, Tiburcio Vasquez or some other one of the hundred bandits who infested the Tejon Pass and the Valley of the San Joaquin.

And sir, they were bandits. Dick Turpin! Fought! A wretched piker! Dick Turpin and Claude Duval couldn't have got a job currying horses for Joaquin Murrieta. Don Joaquin was, without doubt, the most terrible, bloodthirsty and successful bandit who ever held up a stage.

He was chief of a band that sometimes numbered nearly a hundred daredevils, and the treasure that he collected must have been enormous.

An examination into the events of his picturesque career would clearly indicate that the stories of his buried gold are not mere vaquero myths. He must have left treasure in considerable quantities cached somewhere in the vicinity of the Tejon ranch—very likely in the Tejon Pass.

Murrieta is described as a very ordinary-looking young Mexican at the time he began his depredations. He sometimes went by the name of Carillo and many suppose that to have been his real name.

He came up from Mexico, where he was born, at the time of the California gold excitement in 1849. With him came a beautiful young Spanish girl of a high-born family. Her name was Roseta Felix.

She and Joaquin settled in Stanislaus county and had begun washing the gravel for gold when the tragedy occurred that turned Murrieta into the cruellest outlaw the world has known.

At that time there were all manner of race riots through California as a result of the "anti-foreign" mining laws that had been passed. During one of these riots, Murrieta and his bride were driven out of the gold diggings with insult and indignity. Shortly thereafter, Joaquin, while riding a horse borrowed from his boss brother, was arrested and whipped as a horse thief.

With black murder in his heart he "took the road," and no one knows how many innocent lives were sacrificed to wipe out the wrong done this Mexican peon when lashed to a tree at Murphy's Diggings in Calaveras county that day when they took him from the borrowed horse.

On account of the injustice of the anti-foreign legislation, there were hundreds of young Mexicans ripe for Joaquin's picking and he soon collected a desperate band of cut-throats. Chief among them were Manuel Garcia, known as Three-Fingered Jack on account of a mutilated hand which had been wounded in the Mexican war; Reyes Felix, a brother of his bride; Claudio, Joaquin Valenzuela and Pedro Gonzales.

Three-Fingered Jack was a monster of vice and maniacal cruelty. He seemed to take a special delight in murdering Chinese. On one occasion he rounded up six Chinamen on the road, tied their queues together and cut their throats one at a time—laughing at the terrified yells of the living as the dying men struggled in their blood.

For about four years Murrieta's band ravaged central California. Their main field of operations was through the San Joaquin valley. The old-timers say that the stage that ran from Los Angeles to Stockton was held up so many times in the vicinity of Bakersfield that it became an ordinary and commonplace event. No road was safe and every traveler rode at the peril of his life. The solitary horseman, rounding a clump of chaparral, was quite likely to hear the sing of a riata through the air and feel the rope settling around his shoulders with a jerk that dragged him from the saddle. The band of robbers that worked for Murrieta were unique in that the riata was their chief weapon—the riata and the bowie knife. Many of Murrieta's victims were dragged from the saddle and had their throats cut.

There was seldom any parley with the victims nor any mercy shown. With Murrieta it was not only a quest of treasure but a merciless war of revenge against the Gringos.

On one occasion Murrieta and his men held up a schooner on the river near Stockton and, murdering the crew, got away with $20,000. In the firm discipline that he maintained over his gang of cut-throats, Joaquin was comparable to Robin Hood. Also like Robin Hood, all sorts of stories of his impudent daring and his whimsical kindnesses are told. Some of the stories, in fact, are very like the legends of Sherwood forest and the men in the Lincoln green.

Murrieta took all sorts of reckless chances. On one occasion one of his bandits was on trial in a San Jose court. Murrieta had, shortly before, waylaid and murdered a gentleman named Samuel Harrington. Taking Harrington's papers, Joaquin went into court, pretended to be Harrington, gave false testimony and secured the acquittal of his pal.

Another time, in Sacramento, a crowd stood looking at a poster which offered $5,000 for the capture of Murrieta. A Mexican pushed his way through the crowd and wrote on the bottom of the placard: "I will give $10,000 myself—Joaquin Murrieta," jumped on a horse and escaped.

As might be imagined, the horrors of Murrieta's crimes roused a great hue and cry throughout California. Hunted like wild animals, Murrieta and his followers selected a dark canyon near the mouth of Tejon Pass for their headquarters and divided into three bands.

The country was becoming too dangerous for him to continue his work in. Claudio had been killed in a desperate battle at San Luis Obispo. Felix, Joaquin's brother-in-law, had been hanged in Los Angeles. Pedro Gonzales had been shot by an officer near Camulos to prevent his rescue from arrest by the bandits. The Tejon Indians, becoming enraged at some depredation that concerned them, had swooped down upon the bandits, stole their horses and whipped some of the gang with lashes.

Although he wreaked a horrible revenge against those who tried to capture him, he never made any attempt to punish those Indians who took even the clothes from the gang.

General Bean of San Gabriel, who tried to organize a movement against Murrieta, was waylaid on the road and murdered. A campaign was started against the bandits in the town of Saw Mill Flat and Murrieta had the water poisoned.

But finally, Murrieta's Nemesis appeared. He was a Texas frontiersman, named Harry Love, who had come to Los Angeles to live. He organized a company of rangers from among the daring horsemen of Los Angeles and went on a systematic hunt for outlaws.

After various adventures and narrow escapes on both sides, the end came early one Sunday morning, July 25, 1853. Love and two or three companions were riding ahead of the mounted rangers on the flats just west of Tulare lake in the San Joaquin valley. They came upon a small company of Mexicans eating breakfast around a camp fire.

Love asked them what they were doing and one of them replied that they were on their way to Los Angeles. He asked a further question of one of the peons; whereupon a Mexican on the other side of the fire spoke up haughtily, saying: "I am the leader of this band; say what you have to say to me."

"I will speak to whomever I please," retorted Love. Noting that the Mexican had risen and was sliding over toward a saddle that lay on the ground, Captain Love covered him with a revolver and told him to stand still, for there were revolvers on the saddle.

While they were standing there, a ranger who knew Murrieta by sight came up. The recognition was mutual. Joaquin suddenly yelled for his men to escape as best they could. Leaping on a horse without saddle or bridle, Murrieta went headlong over a bank and down into a ravine, landing in a tumbled heap at the bottom. Neither his horse nor himself was hurt, however.

Scrambling to their feet, they started off at a dead run down the canyon. One of the rangers had followed them. His horse had fallen also. Without attempting to remount, he took careful aim and shot Murrieta's horse as it ran.

The outlaw leaped from the falling horse and continued his retreat on foot. By this time half a dozen rangers were following him. Three times, as they fired, he was seen to hesitate and reel; then run on again. One last shot and he stopped.

Turning, he raised his hand and said: "Don't shoot any more; the work is done." He stood for a minute with weakening limbs; then he sank slowly to his right side, his head upon his arm. Wicked old Joaquin Murrieta was no more. Another pursuing party overtook and killed Three-Fingered Jack. One of the bandits escaped and drowned himself in the San Joaquin river. Another was murdered by Mexicans who were afraid he might reveal to the authorities their connection with the band.

Murrieta's head was cut off and, until the San Francisco earthquake, was on exhibition in a museum in San Francisco.

At the time of his death Don Joaquin was preparing his grandest coup. He intended to collect all his booty, and march his men openly, like an army, into Mexico. The old-timers assert that he had his loot cached in the Tejon for this "get-away" and that it is still there.

Ismael Ramirez says that he spent three months looking for the buried gold. One rainy night he saw the myrtle light flickering underneath an old oak tree back of the ruins of Fort Tejon. He carefully noted the location, intending to dig at the indicated spot the next morning. When he went there at dawn, however, he found that a rancher had also seen the light. Ramirez found an enormous hole and a great iron kettle from which the rancher had taken $30,000 in gold.

According to all reports the light has begun to dance and flicker again around the Tejon, ready to guide some one to the uneasy gold of the arch cut-throat and bandit, Joaquin Murrieta.

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines. It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal purposes. These are not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

HAD NOTHING AT ALL TO SAY

Under the Circumstances Captain Could Hardly Be Blamed for Preserving Silence.

Everybody in Middle Bay knew that Mrs. Captain Liscomb was talking about making a visit to her married daughter in Cincinnati. She had been talking about it for two years, but age and the natural timidity of a woman unused to travel had postponed the great event from month to month, until the neighbors began to wonder whether it would ever come to pass.

So one morning, when Uncle Billy Evans met Captain Liscomb in Eccles' store, there was a twinkle in his eye as he asked:

"When's Miss Liscomb going out to Ohio, Daniel?"

"Don't ask me!" returned the captain, a little peevishly. "I don't know nothing about it. If I tell her to go, she says I want to get rid of her. If I tell her to stay to home, she says I'm mean! I ain't saying a single word!"

Poor Man's "Meat." In the Woman's Home Companion, Zona Gale, writing an article entitled Ethics and Cooks, says: "The family of the legumes, 'the poor man's meat'—the peas, beans, lentils and peanuts—are found next in importance to meat and eggs, with peanuts one of the best balanced foods available, and a peanut butter sandwich is quite as nourishing as a ham sandwich."

A man is all right in his way as long as he keeps out of your way.

POTENTATES AMUSE LONDON

When a foreign potentate or royalty of minor rank visits London for the first time, a clerk from the foreign office is usually detailed by the government to "show him round," or, in official language, to act as the potentate's visiting attaché.

I have acted on several occasions officially as guide, counselor and friend to a number of minor foreign royal personages, and when doing so have had some rather amusing experiences.

I acted as attaché to Prince Lidj Byassau, of the Abyssinian royal family, when he came to London some years ago. He was rather an awkward sort of person to have to take charge of. He had a habit when he went into a shop of picking up things to look at, and if they did not take his fancy, of dropping them to the ground in the most lordly and disdainful manner.

On one occasion we went into a dealer's shop in Bond street, where he took up an old Dresden vase and, after looking at it critically for a few minutes, threw it to the ground. I made a frantic but unavailing effort to catch it. The prince had subsequently to pay £300 to the dealer for the vase.

Another gentleman I had the honor of escorting about London for a couple of weeks was the Sultan of Oran. I went with him to a dinner party one night given at one of the embassies. All went well until the end of the dinner, when the ambassador and his wife rose from the table. The chief guest then suddenly hit the table a resounding blow with his fist, and shouted out something in his native tongue, while his eyes appeared to blaze with anger as he glared first at his host and hostess and then at their guests. No one seemed to know quite what to do.

Then, in a low undertone, the sultan explained to me in French he was endeavoring to thank his host for his hospitality, and the incident ended happily.

Occasionally minor foreign potentates who come here neglect to make proper arrangements about having money advised to them from their native country to London, and, as a result, find themselves in considerable financial embarrassments when they get here.

Some years ago a prince of the reigning family of a minor European state arrived in London for a short visit without a penny.

The attaché, however, who was commissioned to look after him, brought a pawnbroker to the hotel where the prince was staying, who advanced £1,000 on the prince's jewels, which lasted the prince until he obtained money from his own country, fortunately only a few days later.

One of the most amusing incidents I remember in connection with my experiences as a visiting attaché was when I took the then crown prince of Slam to a great society bazaar. The prince evidently did not understand, though I tried to explain to him, that the ladies selling at the bazaar were persons of high rank.

A few minutes after he entered the bazaar several great ladies approached him, asking him to buy some of their wares. One of these was a duchess. "Tell these women to kneel when they address me," he said to me in broken French. The ladies, who understood him, promptly did so, and succeeded in taking about £50 off the prince before they rose. Nothing on earth could, however, convince the crown prince of the high rank of the saleswomen.

TIBETANS TO SEE THE WORLD

For First Time in History. Native of That Country Plan a Prolonged Dwelling Abroad.

The people of Tibet are the least traveled people in the world. For the first time in history, a party of Tibetans has left the native country for a visit in England.

The visit received the sanction of the dala lama. The party consists of six persons—four Tibetan boys, whose ages range from eleven to seventeen years, and a Tibetan army officer and his wife. The travelers are attired in their native costumes, but have adopted the English shoes, finding them more comfortable for travel than those of Tibet.

The boys will attend school at Aldershot, England. None of the party ever traveled before. They always have lived in an altitude of 10,000 feet. It has taken them a month to travel 300 miles across the mountains of Tibet. They saw a railway train for the first time when arriving at Darjeeling. At Marcellus they saw an aeroplane and had their pictures taken.

Post Toasties

Are mighty handy to have in the house as well as mighty good to eat direct from the package with cream.

Besides being the most delicious ready cooked cereal food made of corn these crisp, crinkly flakes serve many another useful purpose in home cooking.

Rolled into crumbs and used as an outer dressing for breaded veal, lamb, chicken, pork or ham; they give a zest to the 'fry' that makes the home folks ask for more.

Softened with milk and used with usual spicing and fixing as an inside dressing for baked fish or fowl they impart a delicate flavor to the finished dish, reminding of the chestnut fillings that cast a halo around the days of old-time cooking.

Post Toasties are sold by Grocers everywhere—and everywhere folks who relish good things to eat, appreciate the delicate Indian Corn flavor that makes

SPEED TESTS AT THE STATE FAIR

World's Foremost Auto Drivers to Compete.

MOST POWERFUL MACHINES

Oldfield, Disbrow, Burman, Mulford and Others to Perform on Sept. 20. Will Be Actual Competitions and Not Exhibitions—Electric Timing Devices—Races Are Sanctioned Ones.

This year's Michigan State Fair auto races will easily take precedence over any similar tests ever held in connection with the fair if not in the middle west.

Saturday, Sept. 20, is the day set for this year's speed carnival. Those who have seen such daring performers as Ralph Mulford, Louis Disbrow, Teddy Tetzlaff, Barney Oldfield, Bill Endicott and "Wild Bob" Burman in action can well realize what a treat is in store for Michigan State Fair visitors this year.

Not one of these men but is the possessor of some national record or distinction, and with the rich prizes hung up by the fair authorities some dirt track records are sure to be crumbled by the winners.

It will be remembered that Ralph Mulford, Burman and Louis Disbrow finished well in the money in the big Indianapolis speedway contest on Decoration day. These pilots are in themselves enough to insure the success of the races, not to mention such internationally known men as Barney Oldfield, Teddy Tetzlaff and Endicott.

To whirl around a circular mile track in a minute is a thrilling exhibition, but State Fair visitors are sure to see much faster miles than this, for the auto speeding this year will not be demonstrations, but actual competitions.

General Manager Dickinson will take every precaution to have the fair oval in the best possible condition. This precaution also will apply to the handling of the spectators, and every measure will be taken to prevent accidents.

The blinding dust on the turns which has sent many a daring pilot to his grave will be eliminated by a scientific oiling system and the track rolled hard and firm so that the giant machines will have solid footing for the big speed tests.

As the Michigan State Fair course is regarded as one of the fastest tracks in the country it was not hard to get these drivers to compete. They know that their delicately adjusted iron steeds will not be shaken apart and perhaps put out of commission by the rocky traveling, as is the case on smaller and less smooth fair surfaces.

This year's auto speeding is sanctioned by the national auto organization, so that any records made will be official in every way. Electric timing devices will be used so that the spectators will know that any time announced is absolutely right.

Remember this big racing feature comes on the last day of the fair, Sept. 20.

OLD SOLDIERS AT FAIR.

Veterans Will Mingle With Youngsters This Year.

Monday, Sept. 15, will this year be known as Grand Army day at the Michigan State Fair. All the Michigan veterans who wear the regular Grand Army badge or the reunion medal will be admitted free of charge.

Various tents about the grounds will be set aside where the veterans may convene and discuss old times and have a good time in general.

As Monday will also be Children's day, there will be a remarkable contrast in the majority of the patrons. The old soldiers are in the majority granddads and will certainly welcome young America, for whose happiness they endured such hardships in the stirring days of the sixties.

Horse Department

By N. P. HULL, Vice President of the Michigan State Fair and Superintendent of the Horse Department.

N. P. HULL.

What the State Fair is endeavoring to do is to encourage the breeding of those types which give the greatest service on the farm. We are making every effort to secure the most attractive exhibit of heavy horses the fair has ever known this year.

There has been a steady increase in this class the last ten years, and there is every indication that the 1913 roster will show a healthy growth over any previous year.

There will be unusual features in this year's horse department to attract the attention of western breeders. Liberal prizes under distinct classifications are offered for some of the following well known and approved types: Percheron, Clydesdale, Shire, Belgian, French and German coach.

Special prizes are also offered for stallions, "bred, owned, in service and registered in Michigan." In addition to the many handsome awards presented to successful competitors by the fair, there will be several valuable medals and cups given by the horse breeding associations.

America should be proud of its superior bred horses, and nowhere in these United States are there better grade animals than in Michigan. The recent sweeping victory of the American polo team was due more to the superior mounts possessed by the Yankees than to their superiority of play. The English came here supposedly with the mounts valued at $100,000, and yet the American ponies were far tougher and more agile and intelligent than the animals from over the seas. This is but one instance where American bred horses have proved their right to be classed as the best in the world.

BIG AWARDS FOR POTATOES.

State Fair Alters Conditions on "Spuds"—More Liberal.

A change in the manner of awarding premiums for superior potatoes will be instituted at the Michigan State Fair this year.

In the past there has been no end of annoyance occasioned by "pothunting" exhibitors. It is not the intention of the fair to encourage any such practice.

This year the real growers have got together and expressed a desire for reform in the matter of awarding prizes, and the fair officials have responded to their appeals. If the present method of judging and awarding prizes works out all right this fall greater reforms will be inaugurated next year and seasons to come.

T. F. Marston of the Michigan State Fair board of superintendents had this to say in regard to the new order of things: "The method of awarding $20, $15, $10 and three prizes of $5 each for superior products in early and late potatoes may not seem like such a sweeping reform to some, but as a matter of fact it is a big step in the right direction."

"If the winner of a State Fair prize happens to reside in northeastern Michigan he will be entitled to an additional award of $20 from the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau. In every case the products will be judged with regard to their cooking and eating excellence as well as appearance."

"The increasing of the rewards for perfected products in this and other lines will act as an incentive for Michigan growers to produce the best food-stuffs. Any institution which elevates the standard of food products is deserving of the support and encouragement of right thinking citizens of the state."

WANT SAFETY FOR JEWELS

Theft Amounting to $300,000 Has Aroused the Anxiety of New York Dealers.

New York.—As a result of the recent $300,000 gem robbery, the greatest in many years, dealers in precious stones here have been taking stock of the defenses which safeguard the $500,000,000 worth of gems in the Maiden lane district. In consequence the public now has a better understanding than ever before of the wonderful system which protects this treasure against theft.

Each Maiden lane concern under electrical protection is assigned a box in which is deposited a sealed envelope containing a key to the office and the signature of those authorized to open the safe. When an alarm is sounded and the key removed to gain entrance to the office a record is made and the key is again sealed by the proprietor or sole authorized agent.

A report is also submitted each week showing when the signal for opening and closing the safe was received, with additional data as the case requires. Thus it is seen that the burglar meets obstacles which are almost impossible to overcome. By day the protection of the Maiden lane district is none the less strict, and seldom is it that even the most clever crooks dare to venture into the section below Fulton street's "dead line."

Thanking Augustin Daly.

Like many other players who were with Augustin Daly, Helen Lowell is fond of the memories of that great man and the days she spent in his company. When William Collier was called by Daly's Miss Lowell was a member of the company. Christmas eve as they left the theater each member was handed a package which was the present from Daly. The next day Willie Collier, who was very fond of Miss Lowell, came to her and proposed going to Mr. Daly and thanking him for their presents. Other members of the company advised them not to think of such a thing, but were finally persuaded to join them. So the whole crowd fell in line behind Collier and Miss Lowell and marched upstairs to Mr. Daly's office. The crowd fell back and hovered in the distance when they rapped. As there was no answer at first, they rapped harder. "Come in!" a voice in upper-case tones shouted from within. That finished them. They all fled, leaving Miss Lowell alone, and she has a very happy idea that even she did not thank Mr. Daly for his gift.

ADOPTED U. S. GIRLS

Orleans Marriage Troubles Recall Flirtation in America.

Duke as a Youngster Was With His Cousin Smitten by Two Beautiful Richmond (Va.) Sisters—Have a Jolly Time.

Birmingham, Ala.—Recent cablegrams from Brussels setting forth the escapades of the duke of Orleans and the duchess's suit for separation recall an incident of his career in Richmond twenty years ago.

One bright spring morning in 1892 something of a furor was created among the passengers on the little river steamer that plied between Norfolk and Richmond when they learned the identity of three distinguished persons aboard. They were traveling incognito, but some one recognized them as the count of Paris, his son the duke of Orleans, and his nephew Prince Henry of Orleans.

The elder had come over to revitalize battlefields along and near James river, where he had figured in 1862 when on the staff, with his brother of General McClellan of the Union army. The count was revising his book on the Civil war and desired a fresh view of locale and atmosphere. They had visited Yorktown and Williamsburg, in which battles he had taken part, and the itinerary was to take them to Gaines' Mills and Falt Oaks, where he had fought gallantly.

His son and his nephew were handsome, dashing young fellows, who had seen service and hunted tigers in India. The old count pointed out and expatiated on interesting places along the historic route, scenes of notable engagements in which he had figured thirty years before, and became so absorbed in the memories that he did not discover the keener interest manifested by the young noblemen in two pretty sisters of Richmond, one a blonde and the other a brunette, vivacious and fond of admiration.

Misses Ophelia and Louise Bullington betrayed sufficient interest to embolden young Evan Chesterman, a feature writer for the Richmond Dispatch, to offer to introduce them. Not just then, though; the old count was watching the youngsters with rigorous solicitude. He was stern, proud, a stickler for etiquette, never forgetting that he was undisputed head of the house of Bourbon.

Before the boat reached Richmond, however, plans were arranged by Chesterman for the party to call on the girls at their home that evening. Weary from travel, the count was easily persuaded to retire early, and was tucked away. His room at the old Lexington hotel was across the hall from that of the duke and prince. Nine o'clock found him asleep, while a cab with drawn curtains was hurrying the party of three to spend the evening with the beautiful sisters. Both the young noblemen spoke good English, and a jolly party it was, with clever stories and love songs dashed off in a glass of wine and the spice of adventure.

When the party returned at midnight the count awoke to learn the truth and things were blue around the hotel. Catching them sneaking into their rooms, he thundered his censure and threatened to disinherite the duke for so far forgetting himself as to visit strange women out of his station and start gossip.

"Picture the horrid American newspapers out with your escapades in ghastly headlines!" he growled. "Ugh! I'm most shocked and mortified. And you, sir, heir and head of the great house of Bourbon! Let us prepare to leave this damnable place by first train."

Comte de Paris, with the duke and the prince, caught the 3:00 a. m. express for Washington. Luckily for the former, he did not even see the cautiously doctored story of the escapade. Soon they sailed for Europe. A year later the count of Paris died and the duke of Orleans became the head of the house of Bourbon and claimant of the throne.

Grasshoppers Stall Train.

Dodge City, Kan.—A Rock Island train was delayed for 40 minutes through being stalled by grasshoppers. So numerous were the insects that as the engine wheels crushed them the rails became so slippery that the drivers spun around and the train stopped. The crew with shovels scooped the grasshoppers off the track and covered the rails with sand before the train could proceed.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous membranes.

Kitchen Brush.

A wonderfully serviceable little brush is one made for cleaning pots and pans that have become blackened from use on the stove. The thrifty German housekeeper uses a similar brush. It is short and thick with a stout handle intended for energetic use, and has short bristles of fine copper wire, with an outer row of unusually stiff black bristles. The copper wire is particularly useful for cleaning metal cooking utensils that have become blackened with soot and smoke, and for the same purpose there is a cloth, also imported from Germany, made of exceedingly heavy cotton thread into which have been woven the finest of copper wires. This is said to remove the most hopeless amount of dirt without the use of any cleaning powder.

Lemon Pie.

Cream a cup of sugar with a tablespoon of butter. Dissolve a large tablespoon corn starch in a half cup cold water and stir into a cup of boiling water. Stir until smooth, then mix with the sugar and butter and set aside to cool. Add to it then the juice and grated rind of a large lemon and one egg beaten light. Turn into a pie plate lined with good pastry and bake. Make a meringue of the beaten whites of two eggs, whipped stiff with a tablespoon of sugar, and when the pie is done spread the meringue over it, brown lightly and serve the pie cold.

Bran for Cleaning.

Bran filled into cheesecloth bags is excellent for cleaning wall paper. It is also better than soap for the bathtub and for the neck, face and hands nothing is better. It is as cleansing for clothes as for the body. Boiled and the water used the same as soap-suds. It is as satisfactory for delicate fabrics as soap, and does not injure the color.

Refreshing Dessert.

Pineapple minced into small bits, sprinkled with powdered sugar and a few drops of lemon juice, is deliciously refreshing on a hot evening. It makes a nice dinner dessert, served with ladyfingers or other simple little cakes. Beware of the possibility of making the pineapple too sweet. Too little sugar is better than to make the fruit insipid with too much sweetener.

Remarkable Cure For Dysentery.

I was attacked with dysentery about July 15th, and used the doctor's medicine and other remedies with no relief, only getting worse all the time. I was unable to do anything and my weight dropped from 145 to 125 pounds. I suffered for about two months when I was advised to use Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. I used two bottles of it and it gave me permanent relief." writes B. W. Hill of Snow Hill, N. C. For Sale by all dealers. Adv.

The Farm Burden Bearer

YOU and your farm wagon spend a great deal of time together. Of all your tools, it is your standby. Its wheels roll along under big loads for you—towering racks of hay and grain, sacks of produce over miles of roads to market, loads of sand and gravel, anything that needs moving. When next you ride on top of a load, listen to the constant racking, creaking, groaning sound of the wagon box and wheels, as the load pitches back and forth over the road ruts. It takes solid strength to stand up long under that. I H C wagons—
